

100 Mile House - An Open Ideas Competition

AFBC has launched the 100 Mile House Design Competition which will be a major feature at Vancouver's IDS West design show from September 27 - 30, 2012.

As part of showcasing sustainable design practices in British Columbia, entrants are to design a dwelling structure for a family of four, using largely materials and systems sourced within a 100 mile radius of the city of Vancouver. It is the intent of AFBC to raise funds to build a prototype of the winning entry, and to gift this home to a family in need through Habitat for Humanity's Vancouver Chapter.

"I invite you to become a partner with the AFBC in this exciting exploration of ideas. This is a unique opportunity for organizations who play a key role in promoting and expanding BC's sustainable economy. Together we can lead the way to a new, sustainable level with a community challenge."

Media Sponsorship

AFBC is accepting media sponsorship for the 100 Mile House Competition.

A jury of internationally recognized architects, sustainable design experts and patrons of design including former BC premier Michael Harcourt, celebrated urban planner Larry Beasley, architect Peter Busby, Michael Geller, and Dr. Ray Cole will select the shortlisted and winning entries to be announced at the 100 Mile House Awards event May 19 at the VanCity International Film Festival Theatre, and showcased at IDS West at the Vancouver Convention Centre September 27-30.

"...The foundation's intent is to take the sustainable eco-spirit of its culinary counterpart...and apply it to modern regional home building."

The Vancouver Sun

"...You've heard of living local, but the Architecture Foundation of British Columbia (AFBC) is taking the idea to a new, sustainable level with a community challenge"...

Christina Caldwell, Earth911

"...Creating a home from local materials challenges builders to carefully consider every piece of the structure, from the foundation to the eaves"...

ARCHITECTURE FOUNDATION OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Our Story

The Architecture Foundation of British Columbia (AFBC) was created in 2001 as a registered charitable organization dedicated to promoting the profession of architecture in British Columbia.

AFBC's goal is to provide academic scholarships, awards and grants for architectural education and research, and to contribute to local communities while showcasing architectural excellence in B.C.

These initiatives can only be made possible through donations or sponsorship of special events, such as AFBC's 100 Mile House design competition.

AFBC Sponsorship Benefits

An AFBC sponsorship for the 100 Mile House design competition provides opportunities to promote your business to the Architecture and design community. AFBC offers a variety of sponsorship levels created to maximize networking opportunities, build enduring business relationships, and to provide exposure to over 35,000 attendees at Western Canada's largest design show, IDS West. Sponsors will also benefit from ongoing promotion of the 100 Mile House Competition internationally via internet, magazines, publications and other media coverage.
